MLLE. PAVLOVA DESCRIBES NEWEST SOCIETY DANCE

Gives Instructions for the Cross-Over Chasse, One-Step, With Directions as to Time.

ARTICLE IV.
By ANNA PAVLOVA,
Premiere Danseuse, St. Petersburg Imperial Opera.

The fourth division in my standardization of the one-step is the cross-over chasse. It should come immediately after the polka variation, which, in its turn, follows the forward and back plain steps and the side glide.

The illustration, herewith reproduced, shows the correct attitudes of the dancers in the cross-over chasse at the completion of the fourth count, and during moments of the four succeeding counts, poised on balls of left feet, the dancers first raise, then lower their right knees, the raising coming on the odd count, the lowering on the even; thus: "one" (raise knees), "two" (lower knees), "three" (raise knees), "four" (lower again).

Counts "five," "six," "seven" and "eight" are for raising and lowering of the knee, as has been explained. The next four musical counts are for the assuming of an open position, with a distance of two or three inches between the dancers, the cavalier on his left foot, holding her left hand. The lady takes, on count "one," a very short, step with the right foot; on count "two," a similar step with the right foot, and on count "three," transfers her weight to her left foot. With the fourth count the dancers are now standing at each other's sides ready for the forward glide, which I will take up in the next article.

Simple Food For Beauty

BY LILLIAN RUSSELL.

(Copyright, 1914, by Lillian Russell.)

There are times when foods do not satisfy or nourish, sleep does not visit the exhausted brain, and sallow pallor or ashen tinge takes the place of all healthy color. In such cases there is the food for a wholesome diet, consisting of such foodstuffs as unadorned cake of whole meal and the twice baked cracknels, and you will gain a clear idea of what nourishment really means.

There is immediate loss of uneasy symptoms, the simple food at once builds up the lessened strength, sleep and all good feelings follow, to be interrupted only when carlessness sends one back to the old unwholesome diet again.

Diet alone in time would leave the skin pure, the eyes brilliant, and the hair soft and glossy. In the process the epidermis thickens with sluggish action of the blood, the cuticle layer being clogged with waste tissue, dust, and the waxy secretions of the skin, which water alone does not remove.

I have a charming friend who suffers continually with headaches, the nature of which is entirely peculiar, and she has a decided tendency to make her features fairly distorted, spoiling all her charm of expression. She knows just what causes her headaches, and while she is eating things, she ought not to eat such remarks, but I do love my rich food.

She is also fond of looking pretty, but she has not the courage to take her health in her own hands and regulate it. Her tablets and pills take the place of exercise and diet. The former will destroy the lining of her stomach and ruin her looks, while the latter will keep her fresh in looks and well in body.

Remember: The machinery of the body can only work properly when the fuel is pure, the same principle which works an engine. The quality of fuel for the engine often requires change.

Lillian Russell's Answers.

Marguerite: The instruments needed for the weekly manicure are a good, slender nail file, two pairs of scissors, both curved, but one much finer than the other; emery boards, orange wood sticks, a knife with cleaner, and a bottle of peroxide, and a small package of absorbent cotton. Any woman can care for her own nails who has ten minutes to spare upon them daily and a half an hour once a week. For daily care of the hands, I use a tablespoonful of green soap diluted with two tablespoonfuls of water, and let drops of peroxide of hydrogen. I wet my orange wood stick, which has been wrapped about the pointed end with absorbent cotton, and with it clean my nails and gently push back the skin from them. Every day a little peroxide either with the buffer or with the palm of my hands, does the rest. Dip the orange wood stick into the solution of green soap and clean under the nail, being careful not to push the inner skin away from the nail or in any way to bruise the nail itself. I use a metal substance to clean the nails; it not only thickens them, but it corrugates the under side and makes them more susceptible to stain. If you care for full directions for manicuring, send me the necessary stamped addressed envelope and I shall gladly send them to you.

Ruth: If you will apply a little currying fluid to your hair before doing it.

HATS

A great specialty organization, we take a distinctive pride in showing elaborate displays of Mourning Millinery. "Many women," said one of our old friends, "get ideas that suitable special millinery such as this cannot be procured at home. The reason," she continued, "lies in many disastrous attempts to find it when their searching did not bring them to you."

Scores of women have become our constant patrons through relations beginning with the selection of Mourning Millinery here. From the deepest widow's bonnet of crepe to the simple silk sailor for the young Miss, or for second mourning, every demand can be met instantly and met with numerous variations.

Black and white crepe is looked upon with favor and much worn of late. We are showing a variety of these models, one of which—exceptionally pretty—is of white crepe top, with stylish wings of the same and black crepe facing.

The prices, $7.50 to $18.50.

Some very distinctive and characteristic creations in Mourning Hats will be shown among our window displays beginning to-day. We suggest that, if interested, you take note of them.
